 (51) Int.Cl.⁸ F16C.
 (54) Method and apparatus for harnessing momentum from collisions to generate velocity.
 (57) The apparatus relies on impact between a mass and a harness and collision theory as a significant means of achieving net propulsion and is therefore referred to here as a "collision drive". It is an invention created independently that that combines collision theory with centrifugal and centripetal force. Though the apparatus benefits from the efficiency of centrifugal and centripetal forces it still uses the direct impact of collisions to generate thrust just like any conventional propulsion system. The apparatus creates a patently genuine net propulsive force by deploying a reversible collider arm, turbine, circular harness and a coupling that work together to ensure that from 0 to 180 degrees of rotation and 180 to 360 degrees of rotation the direction of the induced velocity occurs in one net direction. The apparatus can then be attached to any type of vehicle or machine as a means of propelling it.
