(54)	CAMPUS WRIST-WEARABLE ALERT SECURITY SYSTEM (CAWAS)
(73)	Jameson Mbale and Jeremiah Chella
(51)	G08B 25/00
(57)	The invention provides a wrist-wearable emergency alert and monitoring system specifically designed for use in campus environments to enhance personal safety. The system comprises a compact wearable device incorporating an ESP32 microcontroller, GPS Sensor, a single multi-function alert button, LED indicators, and a rechargeable power supply. Upon activation of the alert button, the device captures the user's real-time geographic location and transmits it wirelessly to a cloud-based server via a flask-powered API. The alert, along with user identification and location data is stored in a MySQL cloud database and simultaneously routed to customised Android or web-based applications used by university security, student union security, and the user's designated next-of-kin. The wearable operates independently of smartphones, allowing quick, reliable alerts in emergency situations. This invention offers a low-cost, scalable, and user-friendly safety solution for students and staff within educational institutions and similar high-risk settings.
